Alternative Approaches to Healing Canine Health and Behavior—Saturday, May 29th, 2010 with Nicole Wilde

Most of us are familiar with treating canine health issues through traditional veterinary medicine, and behavior problems with training and behavior modification. But there are other useful modalities that can be used in conjunction with those treatments. Why limit the good you can do for dogs? Come and learn about some fascinating alternative approaches to healing canine health and behavior. The morning session will begin with an informative overview of how vibrational, energy-based healing methods work.

The afternoon is dedicated to the emerging field of hands-on energy healing. You will learn simple, effective techniques to rebalance a dog's energy and to clear blockages. A dog whose energies are in balance will experience improved health and display better behavior. You will learn how energy healing can calm dogs in a variety of situations, and how it can help with health issues, as well as behavior issues such as fear and aggression.

Dog Language Morning Session, & Solving Problem Behaviors in Dogs—Sunday, May 30th, 2010 with Roger Abrantes

These classic lectures are the most comprehensive introduction into the world of canine communication that you may wish to attend. All aspects of canine communication are shown by means of slides or film. Aggression, fear, dominance, submission, friendliness, with all their multitude of expressions, are shown and explained in wolves, jackals, foxes, dingos, coyotes and dogs. Understanding canine behavior and communication is the first prerequisite to build up a good and successful relationship with a dog.

Problem Behavior in Dogs (afternoon session) covers the treatment of problem behavior in dogs from common problems like walking the dog and home alone problems to more complicated issues such as aggressive and fearful behavior. This talk targets professionals such as veterinarians, behavior counselors and trainers but is also useful for the dog owner who is interested in understanding how problems develop or how to avoid them.
